Composition for the treatment of skin conditions comprising sea water with additional magnesium

The present invention relates to artificial seawater and its use to treat a variety of skin conditions, when that sea water has more magnesium in it than in naturally occurring seawater. The treatment of acne, healing and the like can be improved with the product of the present invention and with treatments thereof.